Why do you want to be an egg donor and if you	I want to be an egg donor because I truly believe

had a message for your recipient what would it be?	in helping others create the families they dream of. As a parent myself, I know how much love and joy children bring into a life—my own children are such a blessing to me. I’ve also witnessed this journey personally, as dear family members of mine struggled with fertility and were able to have twins through egg donation. Their experience deeply inspired me and showed me just how life-changing this gift can be. I see egg donation as both a privilege and a very deep, meaningful decision. It’s something I have thought about carefully, and it comes from a place of compassion, gratitude, and a genuine desire to make a positive difference. To my recipient, I would say: I may not know you, but I truly admire your strength and your journey. It means so much to me to be able to play a small part in helping you build your family. I hope this brings you the happiness and love you’ve been wishing for.

How do you best describe yourself?	I’m a firm believer with a quiet strength that helps me face life’s challenges. I can be a bit shy at first, but I open up with time and trust. I believe that no matter what comes my way, I can overcome it. I take pride in being neat and organized, and I tend to hold myself to high standards with a touch of perfectionism. I’m always looking for ways to grow and better myself, whether through reading, reflection, or spending time in nature. I love music, books, animals, and the outdoors—they bring me a sense of peace and balance. I also care deeply about wellbeing, both inside and out. I enjoy looking after myself and supporting others, whether it’s through physical care, encouragement, or simply being present. I would describe myself as compassionate, thoughtful, and someone who strives to live with purpose and kindness
