Behavioural Traits

What is most important in life to you?	To me, the most important thing in life is connection and leaving a positive impact on others. I believe that our lives are defined by how we support the people around us and the empathy we share. Growth is also incredibly vital to me-constantly learning, challenging myself, and evolving as a person. Ultimately, I want to look back and know that I used my time, abilities, and energy to uplift others and bring some good into the world. That is exactly what drew me to egg donation; it feels like the ultimate way to put those values into action by helping someone fulfill their dream of starting a family.

If you had unlimited resources and could save one thing on earth what would it be?	If I had unlimited resources, I would choose to save and protect human curiosity and the capacity for empathy. While it is tempting to pick a specific physical thing, like our oceans or rainforests, I believe that human critical thinking and compassion are the ultimate root solutions to all of our global challenges. When people are deeply empathetic, they naturally want to protect the planet, eradicate poverty, and care for one another. By safeguarding our ability to understand each other's struggles and our curiosity to innovate, we ensure that future generations will always have the drive and the heart to heal, build, and sustain a better world.
What are your views on religion and spirituality, and practiced religion?	I view religion and spirituality as powerful frameworks for cultivating compassion, community, and a strong moral foundation. Whether someone finds meaning through structured, practiced religion or through a more personal, fluid sense of spirituality, I believe the ultimate goal is the same: to inspire us to treat others with kindness, integrity, and respect. In my own life, I focus heavily on the universal values of empathy and gratitude, translating my beliefs into how I care for the people and the world around me. I hold a deep respect for all faiths and traditions, and it is incredibly important to me that the children born from this process are raised in a home filled with love, purpose, and strong values, regardless of the specific religious path their parents choose to follow.
Childhood religion:	Christian
Any specific achievements or aspects of recognition in your family:	none .
Interests and hobbies:	I am someone who thrives on a balance of creative expression, intellectual curiosity, and physical activity. In my downtime, I love channelled my energy into artistic projects like painting and writing, which allow me to express my thoughts visually and explore new ideas. I also enjoy the focus and trial-and-error process of experimenting with new recipes in the kitchen, turning cooking into a fun, collaborative experience for friends and family. To stay grounded and active, I love spending my weekends outdoors hiking and exploring nature, or losing myself in a captivating book that challenges my perspective. For me, hobbies are not just ways to pass the time; they are vital avenues for continuous learning, staying healthy, and finding joy in the everyday moments of life.

What is your preferred holiday?	Beach
If you were offered an all-inclusive holiday, what would it be?	My ideal trip would perfectly balance vibrant cultural exploration with serene, restorative environments. I would start by exploring the bustling, innovative tech and art districts of Tokyo to experience its incredible modern energy. Afterward, I would retreat to a traditional, luxury ryokan (inn) in the mountains of Kyoto or Hakone. There, I would spend my time soaking in natural hot springs (onsen), participating in authentic tea ceremonies, and hiking through ancient bamboo forests and historic shrines. This mix of fast-paced modern discovery and peaceful, mindful relaxation completely matches my love for learning, history, and nature.
Which interesting places have you visited?	Table Mountain, Cape Town
What are your feelings on animal welfare?	I feel very strongly about animal welfare and believe that how we treat animals is a direct reflection of our empathy and humanity. To me, animals are sentient beings that deserve to be treated with kindness, respect, and protection from harm. In my daily life, I try to put these values into practice by supporting ethical practices, being a responsible advocate, and showing compassion to pets and wildlife alike. This deep care for animals shapes a lot of my worldview, teaching me patience, responsibility, and the importance of protecting vulnerable lives.
Strength and weaknesses:	Strengths - reliable and punctual for appointments, emotionally resilient with a strong support system Weaknesses - mild needle anxiety (manageable with distraction), tendency to over-prepare which may lead to minor scheduling rigidity.

What do others generally think of you?	Others generally describe me as a grounded, empathetic, and naturally dependable person. In my social circles, my friends often view me as the "anchor" or the go-to problem solver because I tend to stay calm, logical, and supportive when things get stressful. People frequently tell me that I am an excellent listener and that my optimistic energy makes them feel immediately comfortable and valued around me. Whether I am collaborating on a project or just catching up with family, others know they can rely on me to follow through on my commitments, bring a positive attitude, and offer genuine kindness without judgment.
