Other physical information:	Height: 1.67 meters Weight: 67 kg.
Face shape:	Oval
Other personal information:	Religion: I was raised as a Christian and grew up practising Christianity, but as I have gotten older and developed my own understanding of the world, I have come to identify as an atheist. Although I am not religious myself, I respect other people's beliefs and understand that religion and spirituality can be deeply meaningful to them. I believe people should be free to practise their beliefs as long as they extend the same respect and tolerance to others. Nationality: South African

Blood Group: Unknown

I would describe myself as a warm, thoughtful and curious person. I tend to be observant and take time to understand people and situations before I form an opinion. I am naturally quite caring and I value genuine connections, honesty, respect and kindness. My friends would probably describe me as someone who listens, gives thoughtful advice and notices the little things. I can be a little reserved when I first meet someone, but once I feel comfortable, I am playful, talkative and have a good sense of humour. I'm kind, self-aware, well-mannered, intelligent and respectful. I am also someone who values her boundaries and believes that being kind and being strong can exist at the same time.

I have always been very curious and I genuinely enjoy learning. I am a top achiever and academics have always been important to me, not simply because I like getting good marks, but because I enjoy the feeling of understanding something that initially seemed difficult. Mathematics is my favourite subject because I love the logic behind it and the satisfaction of working through a problem until everything makes sense. I enjoy challenges that make me think, and I am usually the person who wants to understand the "why" behind something rather than simply memorising an answer. I am also passionate about education and hope to build a career where I can make a positive difference in children's lives.

Outside of academics, I enjoy spending time with the people I care about, having meaningful conversations, listening to music and watching movies and series. I enjoy romance movies, R&B, Pop and Afrobeats, and I have a particular interest in stories and experiences that allow me to understand people and different perspectives. I also enjoy simple things like going for walks, exploring new places and having conversations that start off casually and somehow turn into talking about life, dreams and everything in between.

One thing that is important to me is personal growth. I am always trying to become a better version of myself, whether that means learning something new, challenging myself academically or becoming more understanding and emotionally mature. I admire people who are genuine, compassionate, hardworking and comfortable being themselves. I connect most with people who can be both kind and honest, and who are willing to learn from their experiences.

For the future I hope to have a meaningful career in education, continue learning and growing, and create a stable and fulfilling life for myself. I want to be someone who contributes positively to the people around me. I love understanding things, but I also care deeply about understanding people. Smoker: never smoked Reason for Donating: I would like to become an egg donor because I know that having a child is something that many people deeply hope for, but for some, it is not as simple as deciding to have one. The thought that something I can give could help another person or couple have the family they have been hoping for is very meaningful to me. I have also taken time to research egg donation and understand that it is a serious decision that comes with medical, emotional and personal considerations. I am not making the decision impulsively. I feel comfortable with the idea of helping someone in this way, and I like knowing that something that is a relatively small part of my life could potentially have such a significant and lasting impact on someone else's. I believe in helping where I can. If I am fortunate enough to be able to give someone the opportunity to experience parenthood, I would feel proud knowing that I played a small part in helping make that possible.

Behavioural Traits

What is most important in life to you?	The most important things in life to me are the people I love, family, personal growth and having a meaningful life. I value genuine relationships, honesty, respect and being able to look back and feel that I used my opportunities well. I also believe in continuing to learn, challenging myself and becoming a better version of myself.
If you had unlimited resources and could save one thing on earth what would it be?	Creating sustainable opportunities for people living in poverty rather than simply giving temporary assistance, by ensuring every child has access to quality education regardless of their background, safe and healthy shelter/environment, access to free food, a chance to discover talents and how to utilise them to work in their favour, and also offer scholarships to high performing learners living in poverty to chase their dreams.
What are your views on religion and spirituality, and practiced religion?	I was raised as a Christian and grew up practising Christianity, but as I have gotten older and developed my own understanding of the world, I have come to identify as an atheist. Although I am not religious myself, I respect other people's beliefs and understand that religion and spirituality can be deeply meaningful to them. I believe people should be free to practise their beliefs as long as they extend the same respect and tolerance to others.
Childhood religion:	Christianity

Any specific achievements or aspects of recognition in your family:	My family has always valued education, hard work and perseverance. I am particularly proud that my academic achievements have brought recognition to my family, including being consistently among the top learners throughout my schooling, being recognised by the Department of Public Works and Infrastructure and being nominated by them to study any degree in the built environment as well as being awarded a bursary by them based on my academic results. My family has always encouraged me to take my education seriously and make the most of the opportunities available to me.
Interests and hobbies:	My main interests are Mathematics, education, technology and learning new things. I enjoy listening to R&B and Afrobeats, watching movies and series, spending time with people close to me, going for walks and having deep conversations. I also enjoy exploring topics that make me curious, particularly philosophy and psychology based ones.
What is your preferred holiday?	Beach
If you were offered an all-inclusive holiday, what would it be?	Somewhere beautiful and peaceful where I could completely switch off and relax such as a beach house holiday in Cape Town.
Which interesting places have you visited?	Cape Town, Mpumalanga
What are your feelings on animal welfare?	I wouldn't describe myself as someone who is particularly passionate about animals, but I do believe animals should be treated humanely and with kindness. I don't have a strong personal interest in animal welfare, but I believe unnecessary cruelty and suffering should be avoided and that people have a responsibility to treat animals responsibly
Strength and weaknesses:	Strengths - I am hardworking, curious, determined and thoughtful. I take my responsibilities seriously and I am usually willing to put in extra effort when something is important to me. I am also a good listener and tend to think carefully before making decisions. Cooking. Drawing. Problem-solving. Giving good advices. Clear communication and self-expression. Weaknesses - I can sometimes be too hard on myself, especially when I feel that I could have done something better. I can also overthink situations because I like to understand things thoroughly before I feel satisfied. I am learning to be more patient with myself and recognise that making mistakes is also part of learning and growing.

What do others generally think of you?	People see me as intelligent, respectful, very kind, responsible, thoughtful, bubbly and somewhat reserved at first. People who know me well would probably describe me as caring, dependable and someone who gives thoughtful advice. I can be quite serious when it comes to my goals and academics, but with people I am comfortable with, I am much more relaxed, playful and talkative. I think people also see me as someone who knows what she wants and is willing to work for.
