be?	I know how powerful and life-changing the gift of an egg can be, and being able to give someone that chance feels meaningful to me. It's important to me to contribute to something bigger than myself and to help others experience the joy of parenthood. If I had a message for my recipient, I would say: I hope this gift brings you hope, happiness, and the family you've always wished for. I may not know you personally, but I'm sending this with care and the best intentions. I hope it helps you take one step closer to your dreams, and I wish you all the love and joy in this journey.
How do you best describe yourself?	I'd say I'm a mix of warm, curious, and a little playful. I like to keep things lighthearted, but I also enjoy good, deep conversations where we really get to know each other. I'm the kind of person who can laugh at myself, but I also take people's feelings seriously and try to be someone others can trust and feel safe around. My friends would probably describe me as thoughtful and reliable — but also the one who finds a way to make everyone laugh when things get too serious. I enjoy being around people who are genuine and kind, and I love sharing new experiences with them, whether it's trying a new restaurant, going for a walk, or just talking for hours. In my free time, I love learning new things and keeping myself busy with activities that challenge me. I'm naturally curious, so I like exploring different topics and ideas — whether that's through reading, studying, or asking a lot of questions. I also really value family and close friendships, and I try to be very intentional about the energy I bring into the spaces I'm in. I think what makes me "me" is that I'm passionate about growing and living a life that feels meaningful. I want to be someone who makes others feel supported and cared for, while still having fun along the way.
